FEMMES

If life turns its back on you touch its butt. Those were Reme's last words before she died. Thereon, only three of them remains. Three friends, three old grannies, three daily heroines who, from then on, aimed at honouring their friend and make the most of their time so as to tell the world what they are, what they wanted to be and never were. It's time to wake up, synchronise your watches and act. It's time for FEMMES.

FEMMES is a hymn of three eighty-year-old grannies who face death and laugh at life, ironically, mischievously and full of humour. Courageous and very human women who go to streets in order to provoke audiences by means of their absurdly aggressive methods and radically inconvenient protests.

FEMMES is roving street theatre - without text, conceived to interrupt public spaces, intent on getting passers-by to join in, taking the lead roles, supporting roles or extras in a story they will help to create in every town, neighbourhood, city and square they appear in.

FEMMES is a work of fiction, and any resemblance to coincidence is pure reality.
